

Henley Business School climbs 25 places in the Financial Times European Business School ranking 2011

While we are in full swing preparing for our next Henley MBA intake starting in March 2012, we are delighted to announce that Henley Business School has climbed 25 places to number 33 in the Financial Times European Business School ranking 2011, thus also placing it as the highest ranked MBA offered in Malta.

This is a composite ranking based on schools' positions in the FT's other rankings, including the FT EMBA ranking, the FT Business Education open and custom programmes rankings, the FT Global MBA and the FT Masters in Management ranking.

Prof John Board – Dean, Henley Business School

This ranking firmly places Henley in the top 20 European business schools for EMBA salaries (and for percentage increase in those salaries, with 69%) and for Executive Education. It also reaffirms an aspect of the School's diversity, which is reflected in the measure that 36% of faculty are female. Henley has the third highest percentage of female faculty among UK based business schools.

Professor John Board, Dean of Henley Business School, said: 'This result, a rise of 25 places in the European Business School rankings is a very welcome end to the year. With the continued support of alumni and faculty we will persist in further demonstrating Henley's values which are reflected in rankings where Henley participates. Henley is a top UK, European and world class business school, a reputation it richly deserves.'

For more detailed information on the ranking please visit the Financial Times website. For an in-depth discussion about the Henley MBA delivered from Malta please get in touch with Christine on info@henleymalta.com or call us on (356) 21 311 326. We look forward to seeing you on our Henley MBA programme.