

Dr Ann Parkinson - Subject Area Leader

Managing People & Performance

Ann is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development and spent much of her corporate career working in human resources and organisational strategy building on a background in designing and introducing cultural and organisational change.

Her practical and consultancy experience in this field has been wide ranging, from telecommunications to the voluntary sector and SMEs. Ann is also qualified in the use of psychometrics in selection and development of individuals and groups at work.

She has been involved in management education at Henley since the early 1990s, supervising and mentoring MBA and doctoral candidates. Since joining the Henley faculty in the beginning of 2007, she has taught MBAs extensively both at Greenlands and around the world through the network of international associates.